stitions which encrust average English minds till they often conceal the kernet they enclose. is, for bir. Discueli, a mere garment, a covering to be put off and on at will. In this respect, i in no other, he is a Rebrew of the Hebrews. Every where in Europe, kings, feudalists, pricats all who are attached by increst or mental habit to an unchanging order of society are watching andng jourly the sleady growth of Jewish influence in politics, are beginning to denounce it as revolutionary and subversive. It is neither the one nor the other, as Mr. Disrueli himself has pointed out, being essentially conservative of ideas; but it is anti-parachial, nonnational, realistic, indifferent as to modes of life, contemptuous of all traditions but its own, h irreverent of localisid in its thousand forms. are Alone mener mankind the Jew can and does of settle in all climates without visible effect from ate any and his mindenems to have a similar pocathe liarity, a power of dwelling in any mental uses atmosphere without being either blanched or it darkened. Something of Heine is visible in dia. every politician of Hebrew descent, a lutent nal mockery, a mental isolation from the boliefs adin and ways and histories which seem so important ve to other men, a feeling that no institution or the policy or creed is, as compared with Israel, so more than a temponity expedient, which may as well be an efficient one. An English Bishop pro- feels about his Church as he feels about a We promote range, as if it was part of the tion matural order of things, which may be who cultivated doubtless, or left barren, or Mill may even be modified by some great he d geological change, but which was, is, and will in he, there. Mr. Disraeli, who will make that This Bishop, would probably define his Church as con- "an organization which suits an insular and plan very practical people," not as in the nature of and, thinge ut all. If at passes away, earth and rical heaven will remain, ha they remained when the the Holy of Holies was closed for ever. England the is but a part of his world. English instincts the but the passing mental developments of one more. somewhat stupid race. English ways of thought of thought to which time and circumstances have tory, inclined English people. They are "excellent" on people, no doubt, excellent people, and should at? be brimonred : but ideas other than theirs are cland as true as theirs, ways opposed to theirs are as in- reasonable as theirs, systems of action they land. detest urs no mers detestable than their own. ering There are olives in Damascus, and apples in could may be as meeful and profitable and good to gout the palate as apples. In Germany they say dings that the specialty of Jewish politicians is the fiel to directness, with which they desire to apply than thing which secures that, sweep away anything inent which impedes that, are in fact, efficient and conditive ever at a conce. Mr. District exhibited just which that spirit in his management of the Reform set of Bill, establishing household suffrage as coolly not an if the change from constitutionalism to perty. democracy were a trilling one as if the ten-aloyal pounder had no divine right stall; but be more doyal pounder had no divine right as from traditions as as frequently betrays the freedom from traditions The by an occasional burst of cosmopolitanism, as poiled when he drobated the independence of the Pope popul essential to Europe, and when he denied that mater Great Britain was a European country, and her it pro- lieved her placed by circumstances us much as when position between the Old World and the New.

This habit of isolation is were and the New. what seem revolutionary designs, and is most to the useful when there is revolutionary work to be Sonomi so left done. It is highly advantageous bont, for the country and the Tory party that just when Iruland is the business of the bour, the leader of the Cabinet should be a mun of this kind, incapable, from mental constitution, of the liering anything divine because it is English of seeing in any particular Church more than an expedient or inexpedient organisation, of holding the absolute proprietorabip of land in fact, that any political arrangement should be midutained in deffance of obvious expediency. Any English Cabinet, but espe-cially an English Tory Cabinet, and most especially an English Tory Cabinet contered up with Dukes, must be boughted immensely by a strong infusion of the non-purochial mind, a the mind not tied to British soil by a hundred influovable prepossessions, as much benefited as one foreign policy formerly was by the inflaence of the Prince Consort. The temptation of Englishmen is to be Englishmen, and nothing mnions. else. The temptation from which Mr. Dismell is specially free is that of being an Englishman. ervices. and nothing more; and that freedom, even if hich he it does not improve Tory action, must enlarge the Tory greap of political questions. The "detached" mind, when it does things, almost always does them in a large way, sparing nothing unless it is convenient, stopping at nothing unless the exertion seems ton great. Disraell han only to educate his party on Irish questions as he has educated them on Reform, without proposeessions, without prejudices, with no idenheyond the adaptation of means to ends, fully to convince the country that it was well the brain of the Tory party should in a national crisis rule its body.
